Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1, 6, and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Cahill et al. (US 5,940,844).

Re claim 1: a document review apparatus comprising:

a plurality of document review apparatus (7), a communication or network unit (2) connected to a network for performing communication with other devices;

a memory unit (see claim 13);

a determination unit which determines, based on information received from the communication unit, whether the information is information holding a review result of a reviewed form to be reviewed (see col. 53, line 31 - 44);

a storing control unit which stores information, which has been determined by the determination unit to be information holding a review of a reviewed form, as review result information in the memory unit (see 1208; col. 25, line 34 - 65);

a creating unit which creates a single review result information based on the review result information when a predetermined number of review information have been stored in the memory unit (see 1214 and 1218).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 2, 4, 5, 7, and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cahill et al. in view of Mahmood (US 5,091,727).

In addition to the teachings of Cahill as discussed above, he also teaches the document review apparatus includes a first memory (1206), a second memory unit (1214), a display unit (701A), an input unit (701C), and a display unit display a graph (see col. 47, lines 7 - 23).

However, Cahill fails to teach or fairly suggest that the document review system creates and updates the statistical data.

Mahmood teaches a management system generates the statistical data (see col. 6, lines 23 - 42).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the teachings of Mahmood to the teachings of Cahill in order to create the easier reading/comparing data format to present the statistical data for inventory, maintenance, and marketing purposes, etc. Moreover, such modification would provide efficiently means for managing the document review system by analyzing the peak time usage in order to provide a better service to the customers, etc. Furthermore, the Cahill/Mahmood particularly fails to teach that the document review system includes the first and second memory and the modified the information updating function. However, it is notoriously old and well known in the art that the document review system includes the memories and updating the modified information onto the memory or physical disks in order to store important data/information on the separate memory/disk to prevent others (i.e., an unauthorized individuals) from accessing that data/information, and therefore an obvious expedient.

7. Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cahill as modified by Mahmood as discussed as in the claim 2, and further in view of Linstead et al. (US 5,548,753).

The teachings of Cahill/Mahmood have been discussed above.

In addition to the teachings of Cahill/Mahmood as discussed in the claim 2, Cahill also teaches the document review system includes the transmission unit to transmit the information (see col. 44, line 24 - col. 45, line 9).

However, Cahill/Mahmood fails to teach or fairly suggest that the document review system include a notification unit to notify to the plurality of reviewers.

Linstead teaches an automatic notification of the occurrence of events to the users (i.e., an automatic electronic mailing system) (see col. 2, lines 42 - 49).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to incorporate the automatic mail system as taught by Linstead to the teachings of the Cahill/Mahmood in order to provide the easier notification of the upcoming event and/or distributing of the any information to a plurality of users who are interested. Moreover, such modification would reduce a personnel from traveling to each and every user/region to notify the upcoming events/information, and therefore an obvious expedient.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure;

Vajk et al. [US 5,265,033] discloses an electronic mail system,

Knowles et al. [US 5,869,819] discloses an internet-based system,

Day [EP 0 921 486 A2] discloses a network-based document review tool.
